In 2013 to expedite treatment, Community Regional’s ER staff began triaging patients in waiting areas. Now, more than 62% of patients start their care here and 56% of those patients can be treated and discharged without using an ER bed. Community Regional also opened a new Prompt Care Clinic with extended hours to care for those with less critical needs. And a patient flow command center was set up to increase the daily capacity to treat patients from an average of 600 to 630.

In 2013 to expedite treatment, Community Regional’s ER staff began triaging patients in waiting areas. Now, more than 62% of patients start their care here and 56% of those patients can be treated and discharged without using an ER bed. Community Regional also opened a new Prompt Care Clinic with extended hours to care for those with less critical needs. And a patient flow command center was set up to increase the daily capacity to treat patients from an average of 600 to 630.

In 2013 to expedite treatment, Community Regional’s ER staff began triaging patients in waiting areas. Now, more than 62% of patients start their care here and 56% of those patients can be treated and discharged without using an ER bed. Community Regional also opened a new Prompt Care Clinic with extended hours to care for those with less critical needs. And a patient flow command center was set up to increase the daily capacity to treat patients from an average of 600 to 630.

In 2013 to expedite treatment, Community Regional’s ER staff began triaging patients in waiting areas. Now, more than 62% of patients start their care here and 56% of those patients can be treated and discharged without using an ER bed. Community Regional also opened a new Prompt Care Clinic with extended hours to care for those with less critical needs. And a patient flow command center was set up to increase the daily capacity to treat patients from an average of 600 to 630.

In 2013 to expedite treatment, Community Regional’s ER staff began triaging patients in waiting areas. Now, more than 62% of patients start their care here and 56% of those patients can be treated and discharged without using an ER bed. Community Regional also opened a new Prompt Care Clinic with extended hours to care for those with less critical needs. And a patient flow command center was set up to increase the daily capacity to treat patients from an average of 600 to 630.

In 2013 to expedite treatment, Community Regional’s ER staff began triaging patients in waiting areas. Now, more than 62% of patients start their care here and 56% of those patients can be treated and discharged without using an ER bed. Community Regional also opened a new Prompt Care Clinic with extended hours to care for those with less critical needs. And a patient flow command center was set up to increase the daily capacity to treat patients from an average of 600 to 630.

In 2013 to expedite treatment, Community Regional’s ER staff began triaging patients in waiting areas. Now, more than 62% of patients start their care here and 56% of those patients can be treated and discharged without using an ER bed. Community Regional also opened a new Prompt Care Clinic with extended hours to care for those with less critical needs. And a patient flow command center was set up to increase the daily capacity to treat patients from an average of 600 to 630.

In 2013 to expedite treatment, Community Regional’s ER staff began triaging patients in waiting areas. Now, more than 62% of patients start their care here and 56% of those patients can be treated and discharged without using an ER bed. Community Regional also opened a new Prompt Care Clinic with extended hours to care for those with less critical needs. And a patient flow command center was set up to increase the daily capacity to treat patients from an average of 600 to 630.

In 2013 to expedite treatment, Community Regional’s ER staff began triaging patients in waiting areas. Now, more than 62% of patients start their care here and 56% of those patients can be treated and discharged without using an ER bed. Community Regional also opened a new Prompt Care Clinic with extended hours to care for those with less critical needs. And a patient flow command center was set up to increase the daily capacity to treat patients from an average of 600 to 630.

In 2013 to expedite treatment, Community Regional’s ER staff began triaging patients in waiting areas. Now, more than 62% of patients start their care here and 56% of those patients can be treated and discharged without using an ER bed. Community Regional also opened a new Prompt Care Clinic with extended hours to care for those with less critical needs. And a patient flow command center was set up to increase the daily capacity to treat patients from an average of 600 to 630.

In 2013 to expedite treatment, Community Regional’s ER staff began triaging patients in waiting areas. Now, more than 62% of patients start their care here and 56% of those patients can be treated and discharged without using an ER bed. Community Regional also opened a new Prompt Care Clinic with extended hours to care for those with less critical needs. And a patient flow command center was set up to increase the daily capacity to treat patients from an average of 600 to 630.

In 2013 to expedite treatment, Community Regional’s ER staff began triaging patients in waiting areas. Now, more than 62% of patients start their care here and 56% of those patients can be treated and discharged without using an ER bed. Community Regional also opened a new Prompt Care Clinic with extended hours to care for those with less critical needs. And a patient flow command center was set up to increase the daily capacity to treat patients from an average of 600 to 630.

In 2013 to expedite treatment, Community Regional’s ER staff began triaging patients in waiting areas. Now, more than 62% of patients start their care here and 56% of those patients can be treated and discharged without using an ER bed. Community Regional also opened a new Prompt Care Clinic with extended hours to care for those with less critical needs. And a patient flow command center was set up to increase the daily capacity to treat patients from an average of 600 to 630.

In 2013 to expedite treatment, Community Regional’s ER staff began triaging patients in waiting areas. Now, more than 62% of patients start their care here and 56% of those patients can be treated and discharged without using an ER bed. Community Regional also opened a new Prompt Care Clinic with extended hours to care for those with less critical needs. And a patient flow command center was set up to increase the daily capacity to treat patients from an average of 600 to 630.

In 2013 to expedite treatment, Community Regional’s ER staff began triaging patients in waiting areas. Now, more than 62% of patients start their care here and 56% of those patients can be treated and discharged without using an ER bed. Community Regional also opened a new Prompt Care Clinic with extended hours to care for those with less critical needs. And a patient flow command center was set up to increase the daily capacity to treat patients from an average of 600 to 630.

In 2013 to expedite treatment, Community Regional’s ER staff began triaging patients in waiting areas. Now, more than 62% of patients start their care here and 56% of those patients can be treated and discharged without using an ER bed. Community Regional also opened a new Prompt Care Clinic with extended hours to care for those with less critical needs. And a patient flow command center was set up to increase the daily capacity to treat patients from an average of 600 to 630.

In 2013 to expedite treatment, Community Regional’s ER staff began triaging patients in waiting areas. Now, more than 62% of patients start their care here and 56% of those patients can be treated and discharged without using an ER bed. Community Regional also opened a new Prompt Care Clinic with extended hours to care for those with less critical needs. And a patient flow command center was set up to increase the daily capacity to treat patients from an average of 600 to 630.

In 2013 to expedite treatment, Community Regional’s ER staff began triaging patients in waiting areas. Now, more than 62% of patients start their care here and 56% of those patients can be treated and discharged without using an ER bed. Community Regional also opened a new Prompt Care Clinic with extended hours to care for those with less critical needs. And a patient flow command center was set up to increase the daily capacity to treat patients from an average of 600 to 630.